Scripture of Resurrected Man

Death is an impossible reaction to the single event of creation. Creation is only action. Reaction to truth is impossible. Death is an interpretation of life. But life, interpreted by death, is meaningless. Creation is not an interpretive function.

Scripture of Resurrected Man

Eternity is reached by a disassociation from time. Time is nothing more than the conceptual distance between cause and effect. I'm thinking that, that's going to happen. Coming from time to eternity then is only the practice of bringing cause and effect together.

The Workbook of A Course In Miracles provides uncompromising discipline in the technique of disassociational thinking, to bring about a literal transformation of your perceptual mind. It is a passionate assertion of the insanity of conceptual thought, which is what the earth is, in its denial of a single whole truth (or God).

Scripture of Resurrected Man

Now, you say to me: how did I ever get into this? How come, now, here we sit, how come here, now, you, a human being on the planet earth, suddenly find yourself sitting in this room in a place called Denver in a state called Colorado on a planet earth in a galaxy, in whole association with your own mind.

What are we going to tell you? In time, at any moment, you can decide to utilize your perceptual associations through the administering of God, or wholeness, contained within you, at the end of this time association, to make the declaration that you are whole and that truth and love and Heaven is all around you. Okay. That is a fact.

How is this going to come about in you? It is going to come about in you because you are in the process of discovering it is true. It has nothing to do with time at all. It is a statement that, obviously, if time is your invention, and it is the opposite of eternity, that time is not real. Right. Does everybody agree?

Now, the closest you can get to knowing time is not real would be a moment, wouldn't it? Doing what? Bringing your cause and your effect together. This moment, then. Is this moment what eternity is? It is as close as you can get to it. How about this moment? How about this one? Well, what moment isn't as close to eternity as you can get? None! Are all moments the same? Yes. There is only one.

Do they contain all of the moments that you have structured in your thought form associations? Sure. Is it necessary for you to block off in your mind conceptual associations that have held you in the travesty of your own death association? Sure. That's the holy instants. Are they accumulating in you in the maturation of your body/mind association? Sure. That's the Course in Enlightenment.
